

CONTACT — COLLECTION DOCTRINE

Document ID: SH-J2-CONTACT-001 | Version: 1.0.0 | State: LOCKED DIRECTION

Contact is a collection apparatus, not a think tank and not self-directing. Orientation sets broad priority questions; Judgment Officers own problem-specific requirements/RFIs; HQ arbitrates scarce capacity; Contact selects lawful methods, sources, timing, and provenance and hands evidence onward without converting retrieval into institutional judgment.

Six disciplines are controlled: systems collection (queries, extracts, logs, operational/finance/Foundry sources); human collection (structured elicitation and time-bounded directed asks); JAG collection (field artifacts, observation, interviews, context); external collection (requirement-driven lawful OSINT, regulatory, market, commercial, expert sources); exploitation (incidents, bids, maintenance, interventions, capital decisions, outages, and failures while memory/artifacts are fresh); and directed observation/evidence creation (controlled tests, new measurement, structured observation/data capture/interview programs).

Collection management tracks active requirements, methods, clocks, gaps, status, and evidentiary handoff. Flash/Current/Active/Standing labels remain PROVISIONAL. Success means gaps closed, relevance, provenance, timeliness, and discriminating value—not report volume. Universal surveillance, fishing expeditions, and raw-event hoarding violate doctrine.
